
Mans of War? Erhnoarchaeological Approaches to descriptive categories of actors of violence”

Andy Reymann*†¹

¹Goethe-Universität Frankfurt, LOEWE-Project ”Prehistorical Conflict Research” –
Goethe-Universität Frankfurt Institut für Archäologische Wissenschaften, Abt. III: Vor- und
Frühgeschichte Norbert-Wollheim-Platz 1 60629 Frankfurt, Allemagne

Résumé

What makes a man a man - this question is not only raised in a popular German song of the 80s, but also in current gender archaeology.

But going further, we easily can ask a similar question about descriptive topics in the field of violence. Warrior, fighter, man of war. - What do those categories mean, what do they summarize and which words are really usable in archaeological contexts?

Referring to examples from cultural anthropology, the planned talk aims to build up a helpful sketchbook for both sciences, ethnology and archaeology, combining their past perspectives.

Mots-Clés: Warrior, Fighter, Violence, Ethnology, Archaeology, Cultural Anthropology, Theoretical Concepts

*Intervenant

†Auteur correspondant: Andy.Reymann@Museum-Wiesbaden.de